

1. The first group of respondents was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States. The second group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association. The third group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years. The fourth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The fifth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The sixth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The seventh group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The eighth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The ninth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years. The tenth group was composed of 100 randomly selected individuals from the general population of the United States who were members of the National Rifle Association and who had been members for at least 10 years and who had been members for at least 10 years.

John Hoffmann

1731

[illegible]

INTERFERENCE SEARCHED
Class	Subclass	Date	Examiner
all	all	7/2/2007	JMH

SEARCH NOTES (INCLUDING SEARCH STRATEGY)
	DATE	EXMR
EAST search, PALM inventor Name search, reviewed Parent application 08/555,178 for all art sited and prosecution history	2/1/2005	JMH
EAST search - see printout	4/28/2005	JMH
EAST interference search - and inventor name search	7/2/2007	JMH